NOW FOR THE GOOD NUDES.

What do you say to a naked lady?

The problem was posed to workmen and civil servants at the Legislative Buildings noon Wednesday when an attractive woman in her 20s strolled through the halls clad only in shoes.

The woman carried her carefully folded clothes over her carefully folded clothes over her carefully past cabinet arm and spoke to no one as she walked leisurely past cabinet ministers' offices and through the rotunda of the building where tourists gather on sightseeing tours.

A secretary, who first saw the woman as she appeared quietly from behind a hallway door where she apparently undressed, rushed back to her office and phoned security

But despite dozens of reports from people in the building who claimed to have seen her, the woman was never found. A security guard said later in the afternoon his men were still looking for her but nothing definite had been turned up and he considered the whole incident a rumor.

"If we saw it, it would be a fact," he said, "and therefore, since we didn't see it we have to presume it is just a

More Pawns in the End Game

The current tendency in Washington to add a moral or political rider to an agreement that is ostensibly concerned only with trading considerations could open a whole new era in international relations. An attempt by one country to influence the domestic policies. of another through imposition of a moral standard is unusual, to say the least. Well might Moscow firmly reject any such attempt = as, Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko did in the United Nations Assembly this week. But equally well might the Russians see some gain in at least making a temporary show of co-operation — as Moscow did this week.

A U.S. House committee Wednesday voted to withhold "most-favored nation" trading status from Russia unless the latter country officially permitted freer emigration from the Soviet Union. At the same time the Senate was making a similar move in linking a major new trade bill with the same condition. The effort is aimed in particular at the Soviet refusal to permit Jews to emigrate to Israel as many wish to do. Recent surprise moves by Moscow to let some applicants have visas who had previously been refused leads to the surmise that the American attitude is having some effect on Russian policy.

But the whole gambit is a chancy one. For recognition of the idea immediately leads to further thoughts. What other bases of persuasion might be used; and what types of retaliation might be devised to oppose this behavior by one country towards another?

There can be little criticism of the wish to ease the harsh Soviet policy of "imprisoning" its citizens behind their frontiers. Such restrictive treatment of the individual is an integral part of the Communist doctrine of the domination of the individual by the state - a principle foreign to democracy in which the rights of the individual have been preserved against encroachment by the state. But where does this form of moral co-

Russia obviously wants, in its present economic phase, to obtain through trade channels the benefits of American goods and techniques. Moscow may decide that a concession to the emigration rights of its citizens may be an acceptable part of the trade bargain, But might United States Senators then decide that it would also be nice if the Russians agreed to permit more than one political party, or

And if the device proved successful in international dealings, the day might come when the height of U.S. tariffs against Canadian goods might depend on our acquiescence to Washington's demand that we lower our voting age by still another year, or broaden still more the rights of Canadian

The Why and How of Profits

finitely more complicated world of the CALGARY: When any such gigantic project as the billion-dollar Syncrude extraction plant for the Alberta oil sands is announced, it gives rise to many questions once the original euphoria wears off. The agreement between the company and the province provided for split-ting profits down the middle once Syncrude starts to make money. This is giving rise to this question:

JAMES H. GRAY

How will Alberta be sure the international oil companies, who are building the plant, won't instruct their bookkeepers to allocate costs and set oil prices so as to reduce Syncrude's income to the benefit of the parent company profits?

Already there is muttering in Alberta about the Great Canadian Oil Sands The point is that park shooting plant which was built by Sun Oil. It has operated at large losses for four years. There is thunder on the left, and among oil industry figure filberts, that the loss results from Sun Oil paying Great Canadian too low a price for its oil, to enhance the profits of Sun's U.S. refinery

And the tourist business would be operations The fact that the question is being asked at all is an indication of the beginning of public awakening in connection with the operations of multi-national corporations. But raising the question in connection with Syncrude automatically poses a far more vital question for Otta-

Valid Levies

How can Ottawa be sure that its tax collectors are making their levies on the real profits of the hundreds of multi-national corporations which dominate the Canadian manufacturing industry?

In the world of horizontal integration, vertical integration and joint-venture corporate structures, Adam Smith price-competition- mechanism has been ucts and branches is corporation taxa-

Maximize the company earnings in the jurisdiction with the lowest taxes is the watchword of the tax departments of all corporations. For example

The Eaton-Simpson-Bay Corporation has stores across Canada and manufactures all its widgets in a plant in Ontario. The corporation tax rate in New Brunswick is higher than in Alberta, or in Ontario, Therefore E.S.B. Corp. will charge its New Brunswick store more for its widgets than it will the Alberta store. That will increase the profits where taxes are lower and lower the profits where the tax rate is higher.

It will, of course, unless the corporation's tax department is run by idiots. This is the normal practice in the in-multi-national corporations. The nominal head offices of the major oil companies may be in New York, The Hague, London or Paris. But the super-tankers which move the companies' crude oil from the Middle East to Montreal are owned by subsidiaries located in Nigeria or Panama or Bermuda, where there are not corporation taxes. Thus the major company can build up a great cash reserve in its tanker subsidiary by charging high tanker freight to its refining subsidiary in Montreal.

As this surplus accumulates, it can be used by the parent company to expand into new fields and buy up profitable businesses in countries like Canada,

The highly sophisticated approach of corporations to taxes can be illustrated by a change that occurred a couple of years ago in the operation of an Alberta subsidiary of a huge U.S. oil-equipment manufacturing and supply company.

The Alberta company operated as a subsidiary of a California branch plant. Tax changes in California and Texas caused the parent to switch the Alberta concern to the Texas branch. This increased transportation costs to Alberta, raised Alberta prices somewhat on patent-controlled lines as well. The Alberta company's profits dropped, along with the branch manager's bonus, but the company's net income after faxes was

During World War II, Ottawa suspected that U.S. companies were charging their Canadian plants more for compoplants. This was when Canadian taxes were much higher than in the U.S. Ultimately it took the combined muscle of Hon. C. D. Howe and a couple of his colleagues to get Canadian tax auditors a peek at the parent company books, and some price allocation changes.

Whether it is any longer possible for a country to do a complete audit of a multi-national corporation's book is doubtful A small army of accountants might get the invoices checked. But it would take a large army of super-sleuths to get to the bottom of the policy decisions on which the invoiced prices were based.

Of this there is no doubt: If gross Canadian corporation taxes are higher than gross U.S. corporation taxes, profits will be drained southward in the interest of maximum after-taxes earnings. Conversely, Canada could reverse the drain, perhaps bring U.S. profits to Canada, by reversing the rate structure. But that would be a political impossibility.

Key Cards

Where, then, does all this leave Syncrude and the Alberta government? Mainly with the government holding some key cards. Alberta will own the pipeline that moves the soil, and hepce can charge a high enough rate to produce a satisfactory Yeturn. It will also own half the power supply facilities.

Alberta's Energy Resources Conservation Board will have life or death. powers over the physical operations of the plant. And if it cares to make use of it, there is a reservoir of accountants, lawyers and engineers in Alberta which would be quite capable of ferreting out all but the most devious gimmickry in multi-national accounting practices.

Meanwhile, it should be emphasized ment is to get the oil sands developed, to get all the extractive problems solved so that oil sands production can take up the slack as conventional production de-

The conviction is spreading in Alberta that most of the big reef reservoirs of oil have been found, that discoveries of new conventional oil fields will be fewer, farther between and harder to locate, At the current rates of production, Alberta's proven reserves will rum out in about 15 years without further discov-

Nobody believes that will happen, with current expansion of drilling, many new smaller pools will be found to push the "running out" point still farther down the road. The oil sands are Alberta's greatest insurance of future oil supplies. The concessions made to Great Canadian Oil Sands and the deal with Syncrude are premiums to be paid on these insurance policies.

Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss agreed, saying: "I believe the people would see this as the President's responsibility.

If this is true, and it may very well be, we may be at the beginning of a process in which former Gov. John Connally of Texas could replace Agnew as Vice-President and emerge as the leading candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, with a good chance of beating the divided Democrats in 1976.

Cynical But Logical

From the President's point of view, the replacement of Agnew by Connally would be eynical but logical. He admires Connally for his brassy confidence, good looks, political cunning, and emotional eloquence. Both were poor boys who made good, but Connally has the courage of Nixon's convictions, shares Nixon's conservative philosophy and love of power, and is more comfortable than Nixon in the worlds of business and poli-

All this has convinced men close to the President, and other Republican leaders such as Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, that Connally will be the President's choice if Agnew steps aside. And while the Vice-President may not choose to accommodate the President by doing so, the fact is that nobody knows what the courts may do in Agnew's case, and the leading politicians here are now analyzing the political consequences of a nomination, while of course denying that they are doing anything of

The White House says the President has no contingency plan for the replacement of Agnew, The Democrats say they have not been discussing the problemcrats are now on record as saying that if of presumed innocence. Connally says he Vice-President Agnew resigns or is is not running for anything and wants shoved, President Nixon should have no only to be the best cattle breeder in America. And there is about as much truth in each of these statements as in

> At least some of the President's supporters think Agnew's resignation would help the President by avoiding a test on whether the Vice-President can be tried before impeachment, an awkward Constitutional problem in the President's own case. And politically, it would give the President the chance to put Connally in the forefront of presidential politics aly a few months after Connally joined

From the point of view of the Domocrats, however, it is hard to see why with their majorities in both houses of Congress, they would casually go along with Gov. Ford of Kentucky and Chair-

For confirming Connally as Vice-President would increase the chances that they would have to run against him in 1976, and this could be the most critical decision of that campaign, for while the Big Texan may be one of the worst diplomats around these days, he is probably the best politician and the best public speaker in the whole crowd.

More seriously, from the public's point of view, after almost a decade of wheeler-dealer politics under Presidents Johnson and Nixon, one has to wonder where the public interest lies in giving a ig edge to John Connally, who has all Lyndon Johnson's bad qualities, and few of Lyndon's good qualities.

There is no doubt that he is a formidable candidate in a field of aging losers, and has every right to make his run through the primaries and try to take over control of the Republican party and challenge his former Democratic buddies in the general election. But this is not the same as allowing the president, who still faces grave Constitutional questions himself in the courts, to choose a new Vice-President without the expressed will of the party, and shove him ahead of Governors Rockefeller and Reagan, and the other Republican hopefuls.

Unfair to Hopefuls

This not only seems a little suddenunfair to many Republicans, who want Agnew to stay on and other Republicans who prefer Rockefeller or Reagan to Connally, but it is arousing many Democrats to challenge the Ford-Strauss thesis and insist that if the Congress must vote on a new Vice-President, it should be an interim appointment like Chief Justice Burger, who would not be a presidential candidate in 1976.

Getting the Democrats-together on anything these days however, is a problem if not an impossibility, which is why they've now been out of the White House for two terms. But even so, it is not lear why they should reward the Republicans for their blunders, or help elevate Connally, who might just keep them out for two more terms and perpetuate the politics of power and division in the

U.S., French Firms Join In Oil Hunt

COPÊNHAGEN (AP) United States and French oil companies have joined Denmark's Greenland Petroleum consortium in search of oil on the Greenland continental shelf, with first test drillings expected in early 1976.

Grepco announced it will pool exploration expertise and seismic-geological data with Tenneco Oil of Texas and the French companies total, Acquitaine and Elf-Erap in a new international group called Tta-Grepco.

All the companies involved have already carried out individual explorations off Greenland along with about thirty other prospecting groups.

The Danish government, however, is not expected to begin granting exclusive prospecting and exploration li-cences until 1974.

city shoemaker, was standing beside his big finishing machine mending footwear when Wednesday's gas explosion ripped his little shop on Oak

By a handful of miracles, Parisis was the only person badly hurt when the blast touched off a $100,000 fire which gutted five shops in two buildings of the 1800 block.

Luckiest of all was Harold Roberts, a distribution mechanic with the gas division of B.C. Hydro. Called to the scene because a workman smelled gas, he had his faced pressed to the front window of the shoemaker's shop, his hands up to cut the reflection past him.

Knocked over backwards, he escaped with minor cuts.

Two city firemen, Capt. Robert Cherneff and Tommy Black, pulled the crumpled body of Parisis from under the wreckage of his shop, mo-ments before fire fed by gas mushroomed through "The roof was caved in and splintered and he was under a pile of debris, and a wood partition in the shop had top-pled over him," Black said

"He kept yelling and screaming for his wife while we were pulling him out. We thought she was still in the building but really he was saying, 'get in touch with my wife.'"

"Usually I work with him every day, except the one day a week I take off to stay at home when it's not busy," Mrs. Parisis said today.

The day she stays home varies from week to week.

"I was just lucky, I guess."

Safe at home doing her laundry, she heard of the explosion over the radio and headed for the hospital by

Later in the day she went to the shop "because I thought I could find something. But there was nothing left.

"We had finished shoes, and unfinished shoes and new stock in the store, but there's nothing to do now except

Her phone hasn't stopped ringing today.

"I think he's going to get better now," she told one caller. "It might take a long time. But you have no more shoes to pick up."

Parisis is in the burns unit at Victoria General Hospital where his condition was listed as "fair" today. Besides a broken ankle, he suffered burns to scalp and arms.

Hundreds of curious people streamed past the blast and fire site Wednesday evening to stare at the 100-foot strip of charred ruins. Police had cordoned the area and a fireman hose stood guard over-

City fire chief Eric Simtoday described Roberts' escape as nothing short of "a miracle." It was miraculous too, he said, that: -Proprietors of the other

The usually busy waiting room of the Oak Bay Pet Hospital, across the street, was empty, when a chunk of wood

Lone casualty besides Parisis appears to be the dog of Mrs. Edith Eastwood, owner of the Little Wonder confectionary, one of the stores de-stroyed by the fire.

She left it behind when she went downtown shopping and Simmons said it must have perished in the fire "unless it

Three trays of diamond and fancy rings valued at $8,000° were stolen Wednesday afternoon from People's Credit Jewelers in the Hillside Shopping Centre.

City police said the trays, containing from 20 to 30 rings, were lifted out of a glass case between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

A store official said the theft appeared to be the work of professionals and added that tactics used were similar to other jewelry store thefts on the mainland in recent months.

They're Leaning Towards Buying Royal Theatre

the Royal Theatre appeared more a probability than a possibility today as Saanich and Oak Bay council represent-atives lent cautious support to the city-sponsored proposal.

After touring the building and inspecting its backstage labyrinths, members of the three core councils sat in the front rows of the orchestra for an informal discussion which headed generally in favor of the purchase proposal.

But many doubts raised and questions left un-answered, and Victoria delegates were warned that more information and discussion would be required before any firm commitment was given.

men were prepared to say, however, that they supported the idea of buying the theatre for $250,000 and running it as an interim home for the Vic-toria Symphony and other cultural activities.

Said Sanich veteran Ald. Les Passmore: "I am not what you'd call culturally minded but I am in favor of purchasing this building knowing it's going to cost us money to run it."

He said if the purchase option was not taken up by the municipalities (expiry date is Oct. 15), the Greater Victoria area would be "back to zero" in its efforts stretching back

Ron Andruff: A Centre With Good Endorsements

Ron Andruff of Chemainus left the Victoria Cougars for Flin Flon Bombers when the opinion was made that he wasn't about to become a class junior player. That was two years ago.

Wednesday night coach Scotty Bowman and director of player development Claude Ruel of Montreal Canadiens both said they thought Andruff had a chance to stick with the Montreal club for the coming National Hockey League season This is only a small part of the fascinating game called exhibition hockey, just why the professional clubs engage in pre-season camps and exhibitions, and how future stars may be born.

"He's been quite a surprise," said Bowman, "and yes, we are going to give him a good look.

The Victoria part of that "good look" was not just for the purpose of showing off an Island youth to Island fans, Ruel, a former Montreal coach, made clear before the game. "He didn't play in Vancouver because he had just arrived and was tired." Andruff was flown out here at the express wish of Bowman, who referred to him as "possibly my No. 4 centre right now." and "deserving of the chance my No. 4 centre right now," and "deserving of the chance

In front of Andruff are the venerable Henri Richard, still as shifty as ever, but winding down, Lemaire, and Pete Mahovlich, who was ill and did not play here. Dave Gardner is also trying to command attention.

Ruel a Good Friend to Have

That's just how close Andruff is to cracking the lineup of the Stanley Cup champs, and if it is no secret that he wasn't considered that highly regarded earlier, now one of his biggest backers is Ruel.

Ruel didn't claim Andruff as one of his finds — actually Andruff was drafted No. 4 in the Montreal list — but since then Ruel has been duly impressed.

"They told me he had a skating problem," Ruel said. "But to me, if he couldn't skate before, he must have learned a lot this summer. He's had a terrific camp, and I think he's got a good chance.

Probably curtailed by club policy, Ruel didn't see fit to discuss the Ken Dryden case. He offered no opinion on why the All-Star goalkeeper had quit the club after having indicated that the going price for his services had spiralled somewhat since last spring; and when the Habs didn't agree, he

But Ruel did agree with an opinion expressed Tuesday by Bowman that the young fellow with the best chance to succeed where Dryden reneged, was Michel Larocque.

"Yes, he is one of my boys," Ruel declared of Larocque "and he has been the best in camp."

Real Games Start in October

Ruel, it will be recalled became coach of the Canadiens with the retirement of Toe Blake; he lasted two years, in a job he really didn't want in the first place, finally resigned, giving way to Al MacNeil, but stayed on with the club in his original capacity as chief scout. And an excellent judge of talent Ruel is considered to be. The record of the Canadiens under his judgment is considered ample proof of his value to the club. And in any player decisions, his voice is among the most respected.

So, if he likes the look of Andruff and Larocque he also feels Bob Gainey, the Habs' top draft pick, will be right there too when it comes to predicting future greatnes's.

Otherwise, Ruel wasn't too impressed with what he saw "Exhibitions . . . are exhibitions," he said. "Everybody scores a lot of goals . . . Vancouver may have trouble with their defence . . . they have got size . . . but big guys aren't everything . . . they have color . . . will be better than before ... but we can tell more after they drop the puck Oct. 10, -can't we?"

That's when the regular NHL season starts, and as Ruel says: "Then it's a different game, and players don't always play the same.' Ruel wasn't being facetious. He just wanted to set the record straight. For both the Habs and the Canucks.

And oh, yes, Andruff. "You never know," said Ruel."
"That's why we brought him out here — to look some Andruff made the trip to the West Coast as a reward for an outstanding camp. The hustling Chemainus resident, drafted from Flin Flon Bombers in the summer selection of amateurs, also has impressed Bowman.

Unfortunately for Andruff, Bowman has less of a problem at centre than in coal

Wilt Chamberlain, who changed the National Basketball Association rule book and rewrote the record book in 14 turbulent years, has jolted the NBA again by jumping to the rival American Basketball Association

The 7-foot-1 centre quit Los Angeles Lakers Wednesday and signed a three-year contract as player-coach of San Diego Conquistadors for a reported $600,000 a year.

The Lakers promptly chal-lenged his status as a player and threatened legal action. But in uniform or out, Chamberlain, 37, is the biggest catch for the ABA in its war with the established NBA.

JUNTA ACTED TO 'SAVE' CHILE

NAIROBILN, Kenya (UPI) The Chilean military regime told the International Monetary Fund today that it took over the nation to save it from "economic, political and social chaos."

Gen. Eduardo Cano, president of the Chilean Central Bank, told the IMF that at the time of the military takeover the country was on the "brink of bankruptcy."

Cano said Chile now needs help from the IMF and World Bank in "solving the serious financial and economic problems affecting our country."

He said if this help materializes Chile itself "will create the conditions that will form an environment in which external assistance can prove effective."

On Wednesday, South Africa expressed opposition to current proposals for reforming the world monetary system and called once again for gold to retain a central role.

Finance Minister Nicolaas Diederichs said he believes the reform outline now being studied by the international financial community would favor inflation.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Declaring "let it be a warning to others," Judge Edmond St. Jorre sentenced a Kitchener man in provincial court Wednesday to 30 days in jail for a "brutal assault" on two Victoria youths.

Kenard Ralph Karn, 23, pleaded guilty to the charge Tuesday. His lawyer tried unsuccessfully to have the plea changed Wednesday.

The charge stemmed from an incident Saturday night when a 17-year-old youth reported to police he and his 12-year-old brother had been attacked by a man as they repaired a head light on a car in the 100 block Niagara.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said the older brother was grabbed and hit over the head with the head light assembly.

When he ran off to phone for help the assailant grabbed the younger brother.

The 17-year-old was taken to hospital, treated for a head cut and released.

Karn was apprehended in the area.

Defence counsel said the assault was "completely out of character" of the accused and suggested it had been prompted by too much alcohol.

"Drink undoubtedly had somthing to do with it," said Birkett. "But it was an uncalled-for action. Someone could have been seriously hurt."

St. Jorre called it a "brutal act."

He said a fine was not appropriate.

Seventeen-year-old Allan Gerald Zailo of 2324 Dowler Place was fined $75 when he pleaded guilty to possession of Keeler admitted renting the car in Edmonton for one day on June 28 and returning five days later asking for an extension which was granted. He then left for B.C. without advising the company and wasn't heard from again until picked up by police.

Defence counsel D. L.

Police Circus Marks Best Year Yet

The city police benefit circus this year raised $8,400 for charity, the police com-mission was told Wednesday. Sgt. L. J. Mottershead, variety show chairman, said in a letter that ticket sales "ex-ceeded by far any previous year" which indicated grow-ing public support.

Gross ticket sales amounted to $52,625. After expenses, the sponsors share was $10,501.73 leaving $10,501.33 for the Victoria Police Mutual Benevolent Association.

The association distributed $6,400.67 to the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded, $500 to the George Pearkes Clinic, $500 to the Queen Alexandra Solarium, $500 to the Victoria Boys Club and $500 to the City Police Community Band. The mutual association retained Mottershead said the amount retained by the association was reduced to a "nominal" 20 per cent, as opposed to 50 per cent in pre-vious years, "and this enabled us to sponsor and fully equip a workshop for the retarded in the Colwood-Langford area while still supporting other charities.

"In an effort to overcome the public's false impression that members of the force were doing the soliciting," Mottershead said, he suggest-

"Increased hours of service, an expanding book collection and greater community awareness of the library have combined to create public use beyond the capabilities of the present staff," Don Miller, director of library services, told the Greater Victoria Pub-

Miller said both workroom and the circulation counter were too small. Book circulation had jumped a record 39.3 per cent during the months of July and August.

The board voted $1,150 to cover the salary of an additional library clerk until the end of the year, bringing the staff to four clerks and one librarian.

PARK COMMITTEE PLANS PURCHASE

Parks committee of the Capital Regional District met privately Wednesday to consider the approach the region should make in acquiring land adjacent to city-owned ThetiseLake

"We discussed what approach we should make, to the province or whatever, on the proposal," said committee chairman Frances Elford.

No firm recommendation for regional board consideration came from the meeting, said chairman Elford, except to give district executive director Dennis Young authority to enter into discussions with the owners of the adjacent land.

She said the adjacent land is owned by two families, the Phelps' and the Stevensons. Last June, city council said it is prepared to dedicate the 1,100-acre Thetis Lake Park as parkland and turn it over to the Capital Regional District — provided the district finds a way to purchase private land in the watershed area.

No acreage figure was mentioned but it has been indicated 245 acres of 500 acres on the west side must be bought to ensure ecological protection of the park.

Elford said Wednesday it has to be seen what the city's terms are for the "turn over" of the park to the region. "I doubt it would be for any nominal amount, but we really don't know," she said.

Heath Raps Top Adviser For Speech

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER LONDON (WP) - Lord

Rothschild, the scientist scion of the bankers and confiden-Edward Heath, has kicked up tremendous row here by publicly warning the govern-ment against wasting scarce resources on costly prestige

To rub it in, Rothschild implied that the supersonic Concorde was one such at the very moment the Heath government is trying to sell the plane in the United States.

Rothschild was summoned to 10 Downing Street for 30 minutes Tuesday afternoon. A spokesman conceded that the controversial speech was discussed. The spokesman would not deny that Heath had bawled out his adviser.

The brief address on Monguised zoologist, has wounded a herd of sacred cows here.

Heath has been stumping the country to tell Britons ey never had it so good. But Rothschild, relying on published growth forecasts, stressed that Britons' incomes will be half that of the Germans and French by 1985.

—Heath has been saying that "national self-con-fidence" depends on plunging ahead with big and controversial projects like a third Lon-don airport (current estimated British cost, $2.9 billion; a tunnel under the English Channel ($1 billion) and Concorde ($1.4 billion). Rothschild insisted that the country must "give up the idea that we are one of the wealthiest in the world Victoria is still reigning.

—As head of Heath's Central Policy Review Staff, Rothschild is technically a civil servant and civil servants are not supposed to speak publicly on politically sensitive matters. When he came to work Tuesday morning, Lord Rothschild was collared by two of the nation's top civil servants, Sir John Hunt and Sir William Armstrong, and told he had misbehaved. To salt the re-buke, Sir John and Sir William had their displeasure made public.

The 62-year-old Rothschild is no novice to government and it is assumed here that he knew his words would cause a red with anger and embar-

Even apart from his fami-ly's vast wealth, Rothschild may be the most secure man in this kingdom. His scholarly work has made him a fellow of the Royal Society, the scientific elite. An hereditary baron, he sits on the Labor Party's side of the aisle. His big business connections are impeccable. For five years, until he joined Heath in 1970, Rothschild directed research for Royal Dutch Shell, one of Rothschild himself has been reporting directly to Heath, a of access that has troubled the civil service mandarinate. In the past, prime ministers have been largely dependent on civil serits, men like Sir John Hunt, secretary to the cabinet, and Sir William Armstrong, head of the civil service, the pair who rebuked Rothschild Tuesday.

were mild in tone and reflecttruisms. The trouble is that the public could hear them.

Rothschild observed that of economic growth "we are likely to find ourselves in increasingly serious trouble."

He acknowledged that growth was not everything, that many people, particu-larly foreigners found "this is a pleasant country to live in." He here hinted at a growing belief that the much-remarked upon civility of Britons is due in part to their comparatively unhurried style, their semi-conscious choice of leisure over goods. Nevertheless, Rothschild insisted that Britain's slow growth posed "dangers and difficulties as severe and ominous as they were in the Sec-ond World War." This was because Britons wanted both to take proper care of the poor, sick and elderly, enjoy more services like a better train system and support the arts on a wider scale. all these things, Rothschild said, requires more output Rothschild's actual words and necessitates giving up a sere mild in tone and reflect-small fraction of the freedom ed little more than economic of action and decision which are more appropriate to the

Boer War Vet Eagerly Shares His Exciting

In an old house shrouded by trees on Jasmine Avenue lives George Seymour Bagot.

Back to the early days in Aus tralia; back to see vivid Boer War battles in 1900; and back to watch so many deer roam-ing freely on Quadra Island that it looked like "one large Bagot is one of the few Boer War veterans still living and is almost certainly B.C.'s old-est justice of the peace. And he's a man with memories galore, who dearly loves to talk of them.

When he talks and quickly answers questions you fire at him, it's difficult to believe George Bagot is in his 94th-year: Apart from his incredible ability to recall, clearly, events and scenes from long ago, Bagot has the alert, keen

While a lieutenant in the South Australian cavalry F Squadron, Bagot was wounded in a Boer War battle near Langsneck in South Africa but still led his men to victory after the squadron leader had been captured.

"It was a bitter, hand-to-hand battle," said Bagot. "We lost a fair number of men;

Hard to Pick Favorite From So Many Fine Plants

Some gardeners are able to produce a list of a half dozen or a dozen "favorite" plants — maybe shrubs, or trees or herbaceous, or perhaps bulbs.

But others of us are torn by doubts. Do we really like this plant more than a hundred others we know?

Does it really satisfy we fits total appeal in habit of growth, color and texture of caves, color and form of flowers, if any, and does it hold our interest in all seasons?

Enough plants fill these requirements to make it an impossible job to select favorites. All we can do is to tell you of

With planting time now and next month for shrubs, here are a few not mentioned lately, and most admittedly are seldom noticed during periods other than between November and March.

Winter fragrance is an attribute only possible for enjoyment in gardens of mild winter climates — comparatively mild, that is, for flowers demand a certain temperature range before enough will open to warrant calling the plant fragrant.

Most winter fragrant plants are shrubs. An early opener with delicious scent is a hybrid of Vibur-num fragrans (itself a good winter shrub) called V. bodnantense. Clusters of small pinkish blossoms will surprise you in November if the shrub is planted in a sunny sheltered place where the buds develop well in summer. After the leaves fall, flowers open. This continues for every mild spell through

Almost tree-like after 12 or 15 years, Hamamelis mollis, the Witch-hazel, resembles a filbert nut tree while young although they are not related. Quite early in life scented yellow

To grow well and produce new shoots each year for bloom, Hamamelis needs a deep rich soil holding moisture well in summer. Varieties such as "Jelena" have deeper yellow flowers with a purplish centre.

A pretty little tree pretending it's spring in late fall is a flowering cherry — Prunus subhirtella autumnalis — with the daintiest blossoms, seemingly far too frail to endure fall winds and rain. Yet all it needs is a warm spell to unfold the summer-formed buds. They have a fleeting perfume, only noticeable at close range. Plant it where the branches reach a sundeck or a window for full enjoyment in winter and light shade in summer.

Daphne mezereum is never noticed until full of purplish pink scented flowers in winter for it grows only to about four feet high and the narrow leaves are quite inconspicuous in the garden picture. I have seen its variety D. m. alba at six feet full of white bloom in spring. Again no leaves during

These are a bare fistful of shrubs yet they may easily be someone's favorites for they are blessed with one of the gardener's finest pleasures — perfume, fragrance, scent, call it

But, then, the queen might have been a "true" play, that is, a single-ton. Declarer, after some thought, decided that the queen was a singleton. So declarer entered dummy

Thus I imagine that de-clarer would have laid-down

Man Blamed For Climate

NAIROBI - Top scientists are "morally certain" there is a man-made major shift in the forces affecting global climate, says environmentalist Maurice Strong of Canada.

The catastrophic drought affecting sub-Sahara Africa, huge floods elsehwere and signs that the polar Arctic icecap is melting are being attributed to man-made factors affecting weather, he

Strong, executive director of the new United Nations environment program, officially opens his new agency here Monday.

In an interview Wednesday he recalled a recent meeting with scientists as evidence that "we really have to make some basic changes in the goals of society and how to achieve them.'

'The doomsdayers have not made their case convinc-ingly," he said of predictions that the world is going to starve, choke to death or wither away.

"But all the evidence to me from sober, sane scientists make me think it is possible."

Natural disasters, food crises and illness might intervene as a result of global in-ability to cope with break-downs in man-made systems.

two separate legal entities, both were owned, controlled and managed by George Han-kinson and William Neil Smith. Smith was named as a defendant in the case but pro-ceedings against him were discontinued. Mr. Justice Anderson said that as of the date of the trial in June, 1973, "many of the houses were unfinished and do not conform to municipal building requirements, the national building code or to basic minimum standards of basic minimum standards of workmanship and materials."

In May and June of 1972 meetings were held between Guilford and the other two firms dealing with the failure of Hankinson to pay for its lots in accordance with its

Mr. Justice Anderson said that at one of these meetings Smith, who he described as a disbarred lawyer, said Gibralto keep us tied up for three years" and that at another meeting Smith told Guilford in effect "give me $100,000 and I'll get off your back."

great voice.

Precise diction enhanced and made vivid his interpretations at all dynamic levels. He posseses ample color ver-satility which he uses sensitively to penetrate the heart of the song.

Partnered with artistry by pianist Harold Brown, Garrard presented a wide selec-tion from his repertoire including folk and spiritual numbers in addition to the

Foulkes Report Delayed

A report which will outline policies on B.C. health ser-vices "for generations" will be ready by mid-October.

The report, by Dr. Richard Foulkes, commissioned by Health Minister Dennis Cocke shortly after the NDP government took office last fall, had an original deadline of Oct. 1.

In the legislature Wednesday, Premier Dave Barrett said the Foulkes team can take as much time as they need to finish their report.

A spokesman for the team said the Oct. 1 deadline could not possibly be met and the target date now is mid-Oc-

The report is expected to be a massive document, involving as many as seven vol-umes and a quarter of a million words.

At least 10 government de-partments could be affected by the report's recommendations, the spokesman said.

Beef Off 25%

THURSDAY, SEPT. 27, 1973

By WAYNE HARDING Times Staff

The price of beef in B.C. has fallen by as much as 25 per cent in the past eight weeks and may fall by another 5 per cent in the next months industry spokesmen report.

At the retail level, cuts are selling in Greater Victoria for between 25 cents and 30 cents a pound less than what they were selling for at the height of the high-price period in early August.

Half-carcasses which sold in the first week of August for about $1.19 a pound are now selling for about 89 cents a were lifted out of a glass case between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

Intermunicipal purchase of tre Royal Theatre appeared more a probability than a pos-sibility today as Saanich and Oak Bay council representatives lent cautious support to the city-sponsored proposal.

After touring the building and inspecting its backstage labyrinths, members of the three core councils sat in the front rows of the orchestra for an informal discussion which headed generally in favor of the purchase proposal.

But many doubts raised and questions left un-answered, and Victoria delegates were warned that more information and discussion would be required before any firm commitment was given.

At least two Saanich aldermen, were prepared to say, however, that they supported the idea of buying the theatre for $250,000 and running it as an interim home for the Victural activities

Said Saanich veteran Ald. Les Passmore: "I am not what you'd call culturally minded but I am in favor of purchasing this building knowing it's going to cost us

He said if the purchase option was not taken up by the municipalities (expiry date is Oct. 15), the Greater Victoria area would be "back to zero" in its efforts stretching back over 20 years to acquire a cul-

Saanich Ald. John McDonof being "damned if we do and damned if we don't" buy the theatre. But he supported the scheme, especially taking into account the reasonable purchase price, the appreciating value of the downtown site and the cost of providing municipal recreational facilities such as swimming and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, who said he felt "very favorably" about the proposal, warned that if Saanich decided to share in the purchase it would want a firm and continuing say in its operation.

There was no intention of handing over Saanich dollars to Victoria or anyone else and saying "Here is our money, do with it what you wish," he added.

Oak Bay representatives voiced a number of concerns, among them the warning by John Goult that theatre business is a tough business," and the municipalshould therefore seek professional advice on the feasibility of getting involved in

From the same municipality, Ald. Brian Smith said the Royal proposition would have to be regarded strictly as a "Stratford tent," with no intention of trying to replace it little later with grandiose facilities such Memorial Theatre. Memorial Ald. Sam Bawlf stressed the importance of setting up a sound management structure to operate the theatre in the most efficient

He said the municipally-run facility would demonstrate the real need for a cultural centre, before the idea of a costly civic centre "mauso um" is even contemplated.

Laszlo Gati, musical director of the Victoria Symphony told the council members if a combined civic-cultural centre was planned now it would be at least five years before it was completed, and mean-while the Symphony would be without a performing centre.

It would be an "almost irresponsible, criminal act" to decommunity of such a facility cultural activities, he said.

Gati said the 60-year-old theatre is acoustically "one of the best in Canada.'

Hunting of wildlife has been discontinued indefinitely in East Sooke Regional Park.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said today he is taking the action because of requests from citizens living in the area Since there has been no critical response from local fish and wildlife groups and rod and gun clubs, he has closed the park for hunting by ministerial order. Radford said. The minister said objecting citizens argued the park is too close to the Greater Victoria area to allow hunting and that the park's primary use should be for hiking and other

Elford said last week the 4,000-acre park is the only major one within a half-hour's drive of Greater Victoria and the regional board has developed a network of trails through it as an open invitation to hikers. . Elford said today the total ban was "very very good news indeed. I think it's wonderful. I think he's making a very wise decision."-

A Seaspan International tug, the Seaspan Rival, helping another tug tow a log boom a couple of miles away, answered a distress call at 2 a.m. and picked up the crew members within half an hour.

Falt said the Albern was returning to Cowichan Bay from Victoria when the skipper no-ticed on his radar a boat ticed on his radar a boat bearing down on the starboard side. He moved to port but the boat kept coming.

The Albern slowed down and moved further to port and in doing so struck the pin-nacle of the submerged reef, Falt said.

"If he (the skipper) had gone a few feet in either di-rection he probably would have missed it altogether,"

The tug angled on to the reef, slewed over on its side and started to fill with water

Regarding opposition charges the government is of $135 million up from the charges the government is $98 million left behind by the taxing big business too heaviall these profits," he said. Barrett said the "doom and gloom" predicted for B.C. by such critics as members of the Social Credit party is just

The premier also quoted figthe province since the new government took office. In 1972, under Social Credit, he said, total investment in the province stood at a total of $3.72 billion and increased only one-tenth of 1 per cent over the 1971 figure.

Under the NDP, the 1973 figure is estimated by the department of finance to run to $4.11 billion, he said, an increase on the year of 10.4 per

Barrett also said employment figures have climbed in the one year the NDP has been in, and unemployment rate has dropped to one of its lowest levels in years. The premier defended gov-

And he said the government will continue to demand that any policies regarding exports of natural resources will depend on two factors - a fair price for the resource and a maximum use of the resource inside the province, meaning secondary and tertiary development instead of straight exportation.

If B.C. continues as an exporter only, the province will be subject to the vagaries of market-place, he said, ch is not a desirable position to be in.

With the "magnificent resources" existing in B.C. and the "extremely productive people" living here, any minister of finance can be made to look like a "wizard," Barrett said, "including me."

He said when the government took office, there was a total of $250 million of outstanding B.C. Hydro parity bonds held by investors in the province. The government has reduced that total through uy-backs to a new level of $179.5 million and will go lower when it is fiscally possi-ble to do so.

And when a new issue of Hydro bands went on sale recently, they were all gone within 10 days, he said, an indication of the confidence people have in the government.

It expresses concern that some processers, wholesalers and retailers may present some specific problems and that there is a "worrying lack of competition" among some marketing boards.

Incomes had risen at a lower rate than the price of food, and governments must be vigilant to protect the in-comes of those Canadians who are suffering, the report says.
It gives this rundown of major foods: Bread - The consumer price index for September, to be released next month, will show a sharp rise in the price of bread. But the government wheat policy had dealt with the problem and future rises should be small. Beef - There have been reductions in recent weeks and a substantial downturn in the market price of slaughter cattle. These reductions will reach the consumer shortly.

Hamburger - Increases in the price of imported boneless beef from Australia and New Zealand and the reimposition of a three-per-cent Canadian tariff may drive up the price of hamburger and processed

Pork - Prices have beencoming down.

Eggs — The price has been coming down, although not in time to show on the forthcoming September index. Poultry - Lower feed costs should be reflected shortly on the retail market.

Milk - As the government implements its policy of subsidizing milk, the price should stabilize. Examining the consumer-to-farmer food chain, the report found retail prices have been going up with costs, including processors' charges and labor

Members of the board at the news conference steadfastly refused to condemn re-tailers for reports of high profits, saying more informa-tion is needed.

The retailers are entitled to a profit, they said, and the board is watching to make sure profits aren't excessive. Available information on 1973 profits showed some retailers are making less than nine-per-cent return on investment made by the industry in the last decade. Meanwhile, inflation and public anger over rising food costs have dampened the desire of farmers to increase Seaspan International tug, the Seaspan Rival, helping another tug tow a log boom a couple of miles away, answered a distress call at 2 a.m. and picked up the crew members within half an hour. No one was injured.

Falt said the Albern was returning to Cowichan Bay from Victoria when the skipper noticed on his radar a boat bearing down on the star-board side. He moved to port but the boat kept coming.

The Albern slowed down and moved further to port - and in doing so struck the pin nacle of the submerged reef,

"If he (the skipper) had gone a few feet in either di-rection he probably would have missed it altogether," Falt said.

The tug angled on to the reef, slewed over on its side and started to fill with water through an air vent, Falt said. He said the crew tried to back off the rocks but the U.S. negotiators are reported to be preparing a package of draft proposals for considcration by the external affairs department. An outline of the proposals has already been sent to Ottawa and the U.S. is awaiting Canadian government comments.

The informant said repre sentatives of the U.S. coast guard and the Canadian transport department had-originally drafted a plan, but both governments raised objections to some aspects of it.

'The understanding now, as far as the U.S. government is concerned, is that language has been developed which eliminates those problems," the informant added.

Like the Great Lakes plan, the new program would be designed to mobilize resources of men and material from both countries to deal with spills in boundary areas.

It would establish clear lines of authority and action, so jurisditional and other disputes did not delay the cleanup operation.
